The National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) has granted the Highland Arts Council with $10,000 to create the design of a Treehouse Arts Center. The Highland Arts Council and the community of Highland matched that grant at Art Affair 2016. The Froelich Foundation has also granted HAC another $10,000 for the design. More is needed to make it a reality...a tourism destination.

The vision of the Treehouse Arts Center is to create a building that will plant Highland's roots in a rich arts culture. The arts will enhance Highland's community, add to the forward thinking of its residents and the surrounding communities, and draw visitors into the community. An open layout will serve as space for exhibits, education, art fairs, literary readings, theater, dance, and music programs. HAC is considering its location.

HAC's plan is to build a "treehouse" arts center which could be a work of art in itself. The unique treehouse space could be the hook to bring people to the arts and a space for art- and non-art-related events. Dan Hurford, architect from Glen Carbon, will be the designer of the Treehouse Arts Center. He also has designed our initial concept of the building.

The gallery will not only be within the trees, but also have a tree sculpture on the outside of the building. Donations will earn the donor a leaf on the tree engraved with his/her name. As an IRS-designated 501(c)3, all donations to Highland Arts Council are tax deductible within the IRS rules and regulations.
